

About Me

I'm 19 years old and live just outside Brighton in Poynings near the Devils Dyke. I am fully mobile with a full drivers license.

I found an interest in design by playing around with Photoshop when I was 12 on my father's computer. I quickly learnt the basics of web design using Adobe Dreamweaver and proceeded to make myself a website. After developing a great interest in design along with becoming proficient with both programs, I was awarded a full internal computing scholarship at Hurstpierpoint College (the only one given to date). I'm currently studying at Northbrook College for an ND in Graphic Design.

Since starting the course I now have a high understanding of Adobe Illustrator along with Photoshop. Through teaching myself, my web design skills have also greatly improved. I am currently getting to grips with Adobe InDesign.

I have a heavy interest in sports, particularly mountain biking. This has influenced my work as many of my clients have been from within the industry. Previous clients have ranged from small companies to the likes of Red Bull.

Coupled with those, I have also produced many logos and websites for photographers and videographers. You can see some of my work on my website.

I also have a passion for photography. Again this has been greatly influenced by my enthusiasm for cycling. I have had work featured in the international mountain biking magazine 'Dirt' and have sold work to various companies.

I have always had a keen interest in selling and marketing, and have gained experience in this field from buying and selling bike parts and running a company producing parts for bikes (www.offsetbushings.com). I have a large amount of experience of dealing with customers from this. Almost everything I own has been funded through my own endeavors.
